Description

Very good pair of two-branch, three-light, neoclassical silver candelabra in the ever-elegant Adam style. The branches are all easily detachable, allowing the candlesticks to be used separately without the branches, and the the wax drips or nozzles are also detachable, making them easier to clean.

Their height means they are perfect for throwing more light across the table.

The Adam style is a neoclassical style of architecture and interior design that found its niche from the late 1760s in upper and middle-class residences in England, Scotland, Russia and the USA and named after Scottish architect William Adam and his sons, of whom James Adam and Robert Adam were the most widely known.
