Description

This charming pair of silver game birds, realistically modelled as snipe, is cast in sterling silver and each shows fine hand-chased feathering giving a real-life impression. Although similar to woodcock, we believe these are snipe owing to their longer bills.

This is a heavy quality pair of birds made entirely in sterling silver in the traditional lost-wax method, a metalworking process where a duplicate metal sculpture or object is cast from an original model by melting away a sacrificial wax pattern. They are not not to be confused with the many filled models seen on the market.

Dimensions of the hen:
Height: 2¼" (55mm
Length: 3¾" (95mm)
