Description

Art Deco period silver cocktail shaker with removable knurled edge and chained screw spout and cover. All ingredients go through the top opening with cover, and are then strained and poured via the spout. The cover is fitted with a cork seal and the cover to the spout is attached to the body with a silver chain.

Art Deco was a popular design style in the 1920s and 1930s characterised especially by sleek geometric or stylised forms. It represented luxury, glamour, exuberance, and faith in social and technological progress. For that reason silver cocktail and barware were popular categories of goods to reflect the style of the time.
