Description

Stylishly simple, sterling silver Champagne flute - today's icon of luxury and class. Aesthetically, it has a tall, thin bowl and a medium to long stem, a shape that makes one immediately think of sophisticated and indulgent celebrations. Sterling silver does not impart any flavour on your prized Fizz, and this shape allows the bubbles to quickly rise to the top of the glass meaning more fizz for the senses.

Champagne became enormously popular in the closing years of the 19th century after being adopted by the British in its dry (brut) sparkling form. And to this day Britain imports the greatest volume of Champagne than any other country.
